June 1, 2018

PHILADELPHIA, PA and BOSTON, MA – June 1, 2018 – Hill International (NYSE:HIL), the global leader in managing construction risk, announced today it will provide Owner's Program Management Services to the University of Rhode Island (URI) during Phase 1 Stabilization of the Fine Arts Center's addition and renovation.

Located on the Kingston Campus, this landmark cultural arts center supports URI, the local community, and the state, as it is home to multiple departments, the theater program, and 70 faculty and staff members. Approximately 8,500 URI students register for fine arts courses and more than 50,000 people use and visit the Fine Arts Center annually.

During Phase 1 Stabilization, Hill will provide comprehensive management and coordination, including oversight of numerous specialty subconsultants. Our personnel will provide project team leadership, management and technical expertise, and coordination of tasks.

"This building is dedicated to the fine arts, art history, theatre, and music departments and is a crucial piece of the University," said Hill Senior Vice President Joseph Naughton, AIA, LEED® AP, MCPPO. "These renovations and additions will improve the Center experience for everyone. We have supported the University on other high-profile assignments, and look forward to continuing to provide top-notch service to deliver this project on time, on budget, and without disrupting any of the classes or events hosted here."
