Michael V. Griffin of Hill International Named "2003 Civil Engineer of the Year" by ASCE Philadelphia Section

Marlton, NJ -- Hill International, Inc., the worldwide construction consulting firm, has announced that Michael V. Griffin, P.E., has been named "2003 Civil Engineer of the Year" by the Philadelphia Section of the American Society of Civil Engineers. Griffin, who has worked with Hill International for more than 20 years, is a Senior Vice President with the company and Regional Manager of Hill's Philadelphia office.

"Everyone at Hill International is extremely proud that Mike has been honored by the ASCE for his more than two and half decades of accomplishment in engineering and construction project management," said David L. Richter, President of Hill's Project Management Group. "The award could not have been given to a more deserving individual," Richter added.

The award, the highest honor that the ASCE Philadelphia Section can bestow, will be given to Griffin at a dinner ceremony on Friday, May 2, 2003, at the Sugarloaf Conference Center in Chestnut Hill, Pennsylvania.

Hill International provides project management services and construction claims consulting through 20 offices worldwide. Engineering News-Record magazine recently ranked Hill as the 14th largest construction management firm in the U.S. For more information on Hill, please visit our website at www.hillintl.com.
